CLINICAL-GRADE SKINCARE TIPS

Our skincare formulations feature clinical-grade active ingredients. If you're new to clinical skincare, we suggest starting by incorporating our products into your routine twice a week. You can then gradually increase usage to daily as your skin becomes accustomed to the formula. Below are additional key points to consider before starting with a new skincare product:

- When using clinical-grade ingredients, always use sunscreen when enjoying the outdoors.
- Vitamin C Ester may cause a slight tingling sensation, potentially heightened with sun exposure.
- Our Hydrating Cleanser is rich enough to be used as a mask, so thoroughly rinse off to prevent pore congestion. Use warm water and a soft bamboo washcloth to remove the cleanser, avoiding harsh rubbing gently.
- Our clinical ingredients promote gentle exfoliation, emphasizing the importance of moisturization. Remember, the serum isn't a substitute for moisturizer.
- Maintaining hydration is paramount during winter, and moisturizer is a critical step regardless of brand. Properly moisturizing helps counteract the gentle exfoliation process.
- Extra care should be taken around the delicate eye area, ensuring complete rinsing and adequate moisturization. Sun protection remains crucial for this vulnerable skin.
- Immediate reactions could signal an allergy, while delayed reactions may indicate a skin purging phase characterized by accelerated exfoliation. This process varies among individuals but typically lasts 4-6 weeks.
- Patch testing is crucial for those with sensitive skin to minimize the risk of adverse reactions. A small area, like your chin or cheek, is ideal for this test. Immediate reactions may indicate an allergy to certain ingredients, fully disclosed on the product pages on www.bellame.com.
- Consult your healthcare professional for questions about specific nursing, pregnancy, or medical conditions.

We understand that skincare is personal. That's why we offer a 45-day money-back guarantee and encourage consulting with a dermatologist to tailor your regimen to your skin's unique needs.
